A Supplemental report on the working of the Arms & Explosives Regulations prescribed by Govt. of I.P. June 1895, there being a similar report in the Madras Presidency.

This used ~~at first~~ to be called by the Dy. of Explosives, but on the representation of the Chief Inspector of Explosives, the Govt directed (in Aug 1903) that the Report of the Dy of Explosives should be confined to the working of the Arms Regulations, & that a Report on the Explosives Regulations being separately called for by the Chief Inspector of Explosives — P.D.

I agree with the Secretary

Mr. Setlur has written a long & prolix report much of which is quite unnecessary - This should be pointed out.

Future reports should be short - Is there any need to publish the Appendices?

25/2/07

I think the existing practice may be continued as there might be some record of the working of the Exhibition Reports during each year - Whether it should be embodied in a separate report, or a few paras need also be added to a Career Report (say that on Police) is a matter of detail, on which, if necessary, the Chief Secretary may be first consulted before arriving at a decision. The only point seems clear, that that officer should be asked to confirm to the standing order that all Diary Reports should be confined to a statement of facts & events, & should not contain discussion of policy or hints on which special orders are required: these should be reserved for separate reports to Govt

The report for 1905-6 has already been received and noticed in the Chief Inspector of Explosives Annual Manuscript: and the Inspector has been asked to send separately any reference he may wish to make in the matter of the amendment of the Explosives Regulation or rule. Any further remarks will have to be conveyed therefore separately.
There is also the question as to the necessity or otherwise of the Appendices to be printed.

The appendices occupy nearly 24 pages of the printed Report. I think, they need
